Welcome to the Oxford Medieval Studies Programme for Hilary Term 2023!

Happy New Year! Welcome to the Medieval Booklet for 2023.

Alcuin of York, says “Quid opus est nova condere, dum vetera sufficiunt?” [“What need is there for the new when the old are adequate?”]. With apologies to Alcuin, I think there’s a lot to be said for the excitement of the new, and our community is always growing and developing! For this new year, we have some exciting new seminars, including a new Medieval Italian seminar and the Queer and Trans Medievalisms: A Reading and Research Group, new for 22/23. We also have a new addition to the Medieval Mystery Play Cycle: a workshop, led by David Wiles, Emeritus Professor of Drama at the University of Exeter and a veteran director of the Oxford Medieval Mystery Cycle.

Please do peruse the booklet below at your leisure to discover something new, or to check the arrangements for the seminars that you already follow regularly. Make sure to also keep an eye on our blog (medieval.ox.ac.uk) for all of the latest news, updates, and the calendar.

Wishing you all a happy, productive and peaceful 2023, filled with the joys of medieval community.

Medieval murk: twists in #ReceptioGate ‘thriller’ grip academia

Accusations of plagiarism regarding a sacred medieval book have led to an extraordinary dispute involving online threats and allegations that ...

... You might have seen that medieval manuscripts and an Oxford medievalist uncovering plagiarism and academic scandal made headlines over Christmas on the Times Higher Education and on social media – bringing to the forefront the importance of good training in palaeography, manuscript studies and academic research. We are very fortunate in Oxford to have ample opportunity to engage in this and look forward to discussing this and all other things medieval in the coming term.

OMS Small Grants Hilary Term 2023

The TORCH Oxford Medieval Studies Programme invites applications for small grants to support conferences, workshops, and other forms of collaborative research activity organised by researchers at postgraduate (whether MSt or DPhil) or early-career level from across the Humanities Division at the University of Oxford.

The activity should take place between the beginning of Hilary term 2023 and end of Trinity term 2023. The closing date for applications is Friday of Week 1 of Hilary Term = 20 January); decisions will be made promptly after the closing date.

Grants are normally in the region of £100–250. Recipients will be required to supply a report after the event for the TORCH Medieval Studies blog. Recipients of awards will also be invited to present on their events at the next Medieval Roadshow.

Applicants will be responsible for all administrative aspects of the activity, including formulating the theme and intellectual rationale, devising the format, and, depending on the type of event, inviting speakers and/or issuing a Call for Papers, organising the schedule, and managing the budget, promotion and advertising. Some administrative and organisational support may be available through TORCH subject to availability.

Applications should be submitted to lesley.smith@history.ox.ac.uk using the grant application form. Applications submitted in other formats or after the deadline will not be considered.

Informal enquiries may be directed to lesley.smith@history.ox.ac.uk

The Oxford Medieval Studies Programme is sponsored by The Oxford Research Centre in the Humanities (TORCH).

The David Patterson Lectures Week 2

Dr Emily Rose

'The Expulsion of Jews from England (1290): It is Not What You Think'

E. M. Rose, MBA, PhD, is a scholar of Medieval and Early Modern Europe whose work has been hailed as 'a model of thoroughgoing historical scholarship presented to a general audience and should be studied by scholars who wish to bring the humanities to the public square'. A graduate of Oxford with an Honours degree in Modern History, she has been a Research Associate at the Department of History, Harvard University for the past two years and this year is Visiting Scholar at the Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies. Rose's first book, The Murder of William of Norwich: The Origins of the Blood Libel in Medieval Europe (Oxford University Press, 2015), was named one of the 'Ten Best History Books of the Year' by the Sunday Times of London and described by the Wall Street Journal as 'a landmark of historical research'.

Abstract: Taking issue with the conventional ascription of the expulsion of the Jews from England to financial and constitutional issues, this paper sets the expulsion in the context of royal piety. I argue that the Expulsion occurred as part of the deathbed repentance of Queen consort Eleanor of Castile and her mother-in-law Queen mother Eleanor of Provence.

Thursday, 26 January 2023

3 February: Workshop: Staging and Enacting a Medieval Mystery Play

Friday 3 February 2023 (Week 3), 5–6.30pm, at St Edmund Hall, Old Dining Hall
(Postponed from 20 January)

Join this workshop for tips and guidance on how to adapt medieval mystery plays for modern performance, a workshop for directors and actors alike. Whether you have already signed up to this year's Medieval Mystery Cycle or are interested but still unsure how to put together a play or how to act, all are welcome! The focus of the workshop will be on how to cut a medieval play script down to an accessible version (of up to 20 minutes), but there will also be an opportunity to match actors and directors and to discuss any other practical questions you might have on site at St Edmund Hall – and to enjoy tea and cake!

The workshop will be led by David Wiles, Emeritus Professor of Drama at the University of Exeter and a veteran director of the Oxford Medieval Mystery Cycle. Let us know if you're interested in joining by emailing Michael Angerer, the graduate convenor.

Meanwhile, we're still looking for groups to join the Medieval Mystery Cycle: have a look at the original blog post with the sign-up link!

11 February: Piers Plowman Performance at St Edmund Hall

The Fair Field of Folk – Piers Plowman: A Potted Adaptation of the B Text

When: 11 February 2023, 2–3pm

Where: Broadbent Garden (behind the church) at St Edmund Hall, Queen's Lane, OX1 4AR

Director: Eloise Peniston

We invite you to toil with us at Teddy Hall on the 11th of February. From a tower on toft, a trumpet shall hail the dream, before the gentle plucking of a harp will guide you to sleep.

Come and set forth on a dream-pilgrimage, exploring political satire, social upheaval, and spiritual crisis. Maybe salvation will be found in the ridge and furrow but if not, you will- at the very least- have a pilgrim badge to take home as a souvenir.

We hope to see you soon in the fair field. God spede þe plouȝ!

Cornwall in Late Antiquity: New Findings from the Tintagel Castle Excavations

Jacqueline Nowakowski FSA

Director of the Tintagel Castle Archaeological Research Project, on behalf of the Cornwall
Archaeological Unit and English Heritage

Date: 16 February 2023

Time: 1:00 PM

Location: Memorial Room at Worcester College

All are very welcome to attend!

Tintagel, North Cornwall was a major coastal citadel and focus for a unique high status settlement dating from the 5th to 6th centuries AD. New research excavations at Tintagel have revealed major insights into connectivity between post-Roman Britain, the Atlantic seaboard, and the Eastern Mediterranean. Current archaeological research at Tintagel by the Cornwall Archaeological Unit, Cornwall Council, UK, (the TCARP project) has uncovered fascinating new information on the character of this settlement. A suite of stone buildings found with artefact-rich middens containing imported pottery and glass has the potential to transform current understanding of the role and significance of this place within the maritime networks operating during the Late Antique and Insular period in Britain – a time of great transformation and change. This presentation reports on results to date.

Funded by English Heritage, TCARP aims to improve and inform interpretation about Tintagel.

27 February 2023

at 5.00 PM

WOLFSON COLLEGE,

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

PROFESSOR JEREMY JOHNS

ISLAMIC LAW IN NORMAN SICILY

From the mid 11th to the mid 13th century, southern Italy and Sicily were ruled by the Norman family of De Hauteville. Their kingdom is famous for two bodies of royal legislation written in Latin: the Assises of King Roger, issued in circa 1140, and the Liber Augustalis, promulgated by Roger's grandson, Frederick, II in 1231. Historians have claimed these to be "a milestone in European legal history" (Pennington), the foundation of "the first modern state" (Haskins), and the basis of a "model state" governed by a policy of political and religious toleration (Marongiu).

Prof. Johns's current ERC-funded research project, Documenting Multiculturalism,* employs the administrative and legal documents of Norman Sicily, written in Arabic, Greek, Judaeo-Arabic and Latin, to scrutinize such extravagant claims. His lecture focuses upon the operation of Islamic law under Norman rule. From 1060 until the early 1220s, the majority of the population of the island of Sicily were Arabic-speaking Muslims who attempted to live according to Islamic law. How, in the age of the Crusades, did Islamic law operate under Christian rule in Sicily? What, if any, influence did Islamic law have upon Norman administration, government and legislation? Why did royal law ultimately fail to protect the Muslims of Norman Sicily so that, before 1250, both the Muslim community and Islamic law had completely disappeared from the island?

Manuscripts of Character: Codex, Ethos, and Authority in Byzantium and Beyond

Professor Niels Gaul will deliver the E. A. Lowe Lectures at 5pm on the following days in the MBI Al Jaber Auditorium, Corpus Christi College. Niels Gaul is A G Leventis Professor of Byzantine Studies and Director of the Centre for Late Antique, Islamic and Byzantine Studies at the University of Edinburgh; from 2005 to 2007 he held the inaugural Dilts-Lyell Research Fellowship in Greek Palaeography at Lincoln College and in the Faculty of Classics. His research interests include the socio-historical dynamics of schools, learning, and the classical tradition in Byzantium; since 2017 he has been co-directing an ERC-funded comparative project on classicising learning in the Byzantine and middle-period Chinese imperial systems.

Tuesday 28 February - “Codex” – explores the phenomenon of Byzantine literati curating their own writings in codex format and possible ancient and patristic models; with glances at similar practices in other medieval manuscript cultures

Thursday 2 March - “Ethos” – examines the ways in which such codices were thought to display the author’s character, and what the concept entailed in this context

Tuesday 7 March - “Authority” – relates expressions of authorial ethos to matters of mise-en-page, with particular attention to marginal spaces

All welcome.

The Sadler Sets of Partbooks and Tudor Music Copying

Discussants: Owen Rees (University of Oxford) and Magnus Williamson (University of Newcastle)

The digital recovery of the Sadler Partbooks has revealed considerably more than simply the notes written on the pages. Surprisingly more in fact. It has led to a re-evaluation of pretty much everything we thought we knew about the books and their inception, and indeed the culture of music copying in England in the mid- to late-16th century. This paper examines the question of who was responsible for copying Bodleian Library Mus. e. 1–5. Some tempting speculations are explored, and some new paradigms proposed.

Soav' e dolce* – Nicola Vicentino's Intervallic Vision

The musical ideas and visions that Vicentino sets out in his writings L'antica musica ridotta alla moderna prattica (Rome 1555) and the Manifesto for his arciorgano can only be concretely traced on the basis of a few, mostly fragmentary, surviving compositions. However, the research carried out within the framework of the SNSF-funded research project "Vicentino21" (<https://www.fhnw.ch/plattformen/vicentino21/>), with the aim of creating a digital edition of Vicentino's treatise, now provides concrete findings. Using the example of the madrigal Soav' e dolce ardore (III:51, fol. 67), questions concerning Vicentino's musical visions and the edition will be discussed.

The Fifteenth-Century Song Mass: Some Challenges

Discussants: Fabrice Fitch (Royal Conservatoire of Scotland) and Sean Gallagher (New England Conservatory)

Love songs and the Catholic Mass do not make easy bedfellows. The earthly, amorous, even carnal feelings explored in fifteenth-century chansons seem at odds with the solemnity of Christian observance's most central rite. Recent scholarship has attempted to bridge this divide, showing how some of these genre-crossing pieces conflate the earthly lady with the Virgin Mary, thereby effacing the divide between sacred and secular. But a substantial body of song masses survives whose source material is decidedly not amenable to this type of interpretation—masses based on songs that are less "My gracious lady is without peer" and more "Hey miller girl, come grind my grain"—or, as we shall see, worse. This paper turns an eye toward these misfit masses, surveying the corpus for a sense of what there is—the Whos, Whats, Wheres, and Whens—as a first step toward the Hows and Whys of these puzzling pieces. One particularly tricky example, the mass variously referred to as Je ne demande and Elle est bien malade, suggests that it may be time to replace prevailing sacred–secular interpretative models with a new approach.

Discussion Group: Governability across the medieval globe

Governability across the medieval globe

We are a discussion group which meets twice a term to discuss governance and the experience of being governed - and how these interacted with different kinds of spaces, different sorts of scales and with specific communities and localities. In particular, we are interested in interrogating such questions as:

- What was the experience of being governed?
- Why were some areas more intensely governed than others?
- How did different actors interact with governance and governments?
- Who governed, how and why?
- How did identity, community, religion and gender affect interactions/relationships with governing/those governing?

This term we will meet at 12:00-13:30 on Tuesday in the History Faculty. Everyone welcome: staff, students and researchers, of all historical periods. We encourage you to bring lunch along.

- Session 1, week 3, Tuesday 31st January - Water
- Session 2, week 5, Tuesday 14th February ♡ - Gender

Old Norse Poetry in Performance

St Hugh's College, Oxford 21–22 June 2023

Call for Participants

Old Norse Poetry in Performance: Inheritance and Innovation

Following its covid-induced hiatus, the third iteration of the triennial Old Norse Poetry in Performance conference will take place at St Hugh's College, Oxford, on the 21st and 22nd of June 2023. Building on the successes of the conferences in 2016 and 2019 – which resulted in the recent publication of Old Norse Poetry in Performance (2022), a collection of essays edited by the previous organisers Brian McMahon and Annemari Ferreira – the intention of this conference remains, as before, to platform and develop the network of scholars and practitioners mutually interested in the poetic performance traditions of medieval Scandinavia.

With the theme 'Inheritance and Innovation', the 2023 programme aims to reflect even more completely the diversity in the performance traditions of the Old Norse source material, the scholarly traditions within the field, and the new, interdisciplinary perspectives being developed today. To this end, this conference will maintain the format of its previous iterations, showcasing academic research, practical performances, and the possibilities offered by combining the two. The organisers invite proposals for 20-minute papers and/or performances, which might cover, but need not be limited to, the following:

- Comparative approaches to eddic, skaldic, and rímur performances
- Legacies of performance traditions
- The 'beyond-the-page' approach to source texts
- The effects of translation on performance
- Legacies of scholarly traditions
- Interdisciplinary adaptations of Old Norse poems

Proposals should be no more than 300 words and should be sent to oldnorsepoetryinperformance@gmail.com, accompanied by a brief biographical note, by midnight on 17th February 2023.

For more information, please visit the conference website oldnorsepoetryinperformance.com, or contact the organisers, Inés García López, Clare Mulley, Richard Munro, and Ben Chennells, at the email address given above.

Teaching the Codex: Call for Contributions

Teaching the Codex publishes two series on our website, and we are looking for more contributors for both items.

Our blog contains posts from the manuscript studies community on any aspect of teaching or learning with manuscripts. Past topics include teaching yourself the codex, making your own parchment, personal teaching reflections, applying palaeographical techniques to modern research, and teaching palaeography during the pandemic.

Teachable Features is an online pedagogical resource offering images and descriptions of palaeographical and codicological features. It is a digital learning facility which can be accessed without geographical restrictions. If any manuscript features catch your eye, think about contributing! Previous contributions include a binding error, pricking and ruling, digitization, and we have an entry on errors and corrections which is regularly updated. An image (with permission to share) and a caption are all we need, but we also post fuller descriptions.

We welcome posts from contributors at all stages, and guidelines are available at <http://bit.ly/TtCGuidelines>. If you are interested in participating, please email a brief outline of your post to teachingthecodex@gmail.com

Teaching with Manuscripts

Thinking of incorporating medieval manuscript material in your teaching but not sure where to start? Sign up for a workshop with Andrew Dunning and Matthew Holford, curators at the Bodleian Library, where we will try to answer your questions and lead a discussion on what does and doesn't work when teaching with manuscripts. Please sign up using this form. We will hold one or more workshops (depending on interest) early in term.

Workshop on manuscript description and cataloguing

This workshop, to be held over 3-4 weeks in the second half of term, is intended for postgraduate students working on Western medieval manuscript/s in the Bodleian Library who would like, as a by-product of their research, to produce formal catalogue description/s for publication on Medieval Manuscripts in Oxford Libraries. Please express interest using this form.

The Latin Works of Piccolomini (Pius II): A Colloquium

This colloquium is the first in a collaboration on medieval and early modern Latin between the Faculty of Classics at the University of Oxford and the Abteilung für Griechische und Lateinische Philologie at the Friedrich-Wilhelms-Universität, Bonn. There will be eleven papers on the Latin works of the fifteenth-century humanist, Enea Silvio Piccolomini (later Pope Pius II). The draft timetable is available here.

The colloquium begins on Thursday afternoon and runs until Friday evening. The registration fee of £10:- contributes toward the subsidised cost of refreshments (incl. lunch on the full day). IDENTITIES, COMMUNITIES AND 'IMAGINED COMMUNITIES'

POSTGRADUATE CONFERENCE 2023

After the success of the 2022 'Transitions' Conference, we invite you to the next instalment of the longest-standing medievalist PGR conference series. This year's theme of Identities, Communities, and 'Imagined Communities' marks the 40-year anniversary of the publication of Benedict Anderson's book on national identity. Observing all the uses medievalists have made of his theories in subsequent years, the conference celebrates the interdisciplinary currents that have benefitted academia in recent decades – Anderson, after all, did not initially believe his theories were suitable for the medieval world.

We welcome respondents and delegates to reflect on how we use concepts of identity and community more broadly across medieval history. Society's interest in its identities is arguably more topical today than it was in 1983 when Imagined Communities was first published. How did medieval communities see and perform their identities, how did this change over time, and why? What role did identities play – be they political, linguistic, or religious – in the consolidation of some communities and the subjugation of others?

CALL FOR PAPERS

Abstracts and enquiries :
[cms-conference-

We welcome abstracts from postgraduates and early-career researchers, exploring all the aspects and approaches to concepts of identity and communities, in all relevant disciplines pertaining to the medieval period, broadly construed c.500-c.1500. Abstracts are 300 words for 20-minute papers. This year's conference will be a hybrid event online and on the campus of the University of Bristol.

The Medieval Church: From Margins to Centre

University of York, 26-27 June 2023

Sponsored by the Centre for Medieval Studies and Department of History at the University of York

Simon Benning, Villagers on Their Way to Church (c.1550), Getty Ms. 50, recto.

This conference aims to consider the relationship between the Church and the marginalised in medieval society – minority genders and sexualities, racial minorities, disabled people, non-Christians, and the poor. How did the Church respond to, oppress, or offer opportunities to those on the margins, and how did marginalised individuals and groups exercise agency through their interactions with the institutions and mechanisms of the Church?

We welcome papers from researchers at all career stages working across the medieval period (c.400-1500) and with disciplinary focuses including but not limited to History, Literary Studies, Art History and Archaeology.

This conference will be held in a hybrid format, with options for presenting and attending remotely.

Please send abstracts of up to 250 words to Tim Wingard
(tim.wingard@york.ac.uk) by 5pm GMT on Sunday 5 February 2023.
