Funding for my own research

1994-1997: ESRC PhD studentship

2004: Four-month ARHB Research Leave.

Teaching and teaching-related experience

Undergraduate teaching:

September 2000 to date:, I have taught undergraduate courses on justice, history of political thought from Plato to Rawls, and the ethics of war (both lectures and classes). From 1994 to 2000, I taught politics to undergraduate students from Oxford colleges. The courses I taught include the following: Introduction to Politics –Political Philosophy and French Politics-, Theory of Politics, History of Classical Political Thought, Foundations of Modern Social and Political Thought.

Graduate teaching

- Masters level/BPhil: I have taught courses in contemporary moral political philosophy (distributive justice, ethics of war, ethics of killing), and have supervised on average 4 to 7 dissertations every year. My Masters students have written dissertations on (inter alia, and most recently) supreme emergency and non combatant immunity, the politics of humanitarian intervention, abortion, ethics of genetics, the ethics of military occupation.

- Doctoral supervision: I have been supervising a number of doctoral students, five to completion so far, one of whom obtained the PSA Annual Prize for best dissertation in political theory in 2007 (on Kantian cosmopolitanism), three of whom have secured permanent lectureships (Sheffield (2), and Buenos-Aires). The other two currently hold postdoctoral fellowships in the UK and Germany respectively. Topics supervised (inter alia): animal rights; humanitarian intervention; extraterritorial punishment; the ethics of abortion; the permissibility of the use of force in transnational environmental disputes; the ethics of military occupation.

Administrative experience

*1998-2000 Entrance interviews at Worcester College for the PPE degree (with Professor Alan Ware.)

* 2004-2005: Admission Tutor for the MSc in Political Theory, LSE

* 09/2005 onwards: Convenor for Research Students at the LSE and Edinburgh. The position involves, inter alia:

- overseeing the application process (going through all applications, dispatching them to potential supervisors, answering applicants' queries)

- designing and overseeing the methodological training of 1st year doctoral students (which involves organising and chairing methods seminars as well as research workshops)

- overseeing the monitoring of all doctoral students at the end of the academic year
- dealing with various issues such as changes of supervisors, pastoral concerns, leaves of absence for fieldwork, interruptions of studies for personal reasons, etc.
- overseeing departmental nominations for ESRC and AHRC PhD studentships
- assessing and ranking students' applications for institutional funding
- Overseeing the creation and administration of a joint PhD programme (EU-funded) with Cologne University.
- Overseeing a funding bid for ESRC recognition, with special emphasis on methods training in political philosophy and philosophy of social sciences.

*2006 onwards: took a leading role in setting up the joint BSc in Government and Philosophy at the LSE, and the joint MSc in Ethics and Political Philosophy at Edinburgh (both degrees rely on close cooperation between the departments of Philosophy and Government/Politics.)

*2010 onwards: I currently serve on the College's Senior Tutor Committee and the Faculty's Research committee. Examining. Admissions.

*Extensive examining experience, including doctoral examination, external examining (at UCL, for the BA in Modern European Studies, since 2007).

Conference organising:

Organisation of two international conferences in Oxford, in June 2000 (Franco-British conference on Republicanism) and December 1998 (Franco-British conference on the history and representation - literary and pictorial - of slavery in the 17th to 19th centuries.) Organisation of two conferences in Edinburgh, the Northern Political Theory Association Conference in February 2008 (20 delegates), and the Annual Conference of the Association for Legal and Social Philosophy in 2009 (95 delegates.)

Pastoral experience

In my role of personal tutor to a number of undergraduates and Masters students every year, I have had to liaise with the relevant authorities (such as Mental Health advisors, Disability advisors, and the Dean's Office) on behalf of those of my tutees who have severe health and family-related problems.
